REPORT READ AT THE GRADUATION OF THE 1917 CLASS.

JANUARY 1, 1917.

Alumnae and Friends of the School.

GREETING:

IT is a pleasure and an honor to present the report of our school for nurses at this graduation of the forty-second class.

May I quote from the first report, which was published in 1879, which says: "The Boston Training School for Nurses has now been in operation nearly five years. It was liberally assisted to make a beginning, it has attained a reasonable success, and it seems fit to give an account of our work to those who have helped it and to those who naturally profit by it, and by showing what are our desires and our difficulties, to gain an intelligent comprehension thereof, and, we trust, farther aid from our friends and the public."

May I use this extract for the text of my report this evening? Nothing that I could compose could possibly be more appropriate. There were three in the first class of 1875—this evening we are graduating 47.

When the first report was printed there were 48 nurses in the service of the hospital. At this time there are 267.

When the first report came out their 39 graduates were helping to meet the local needs in private and institutional work. Those who graduated in 1916 are dispersed in the states of Massachusetts, Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Illinois, California, Washington, D. C., and in France.

The Training School has grown from a simple working auxiliary to the hospital to a highly complex and difficult organization that combines the old apprentice method of education with the modern academic system.

From an initiation where the student nurses were simply tolerated, they are now sought for by every department in increasing numbers. There is no such thing nowadays as "settling comfortably into a rut." People are asking us to prepare our nurses for all sorts of work. Now that we are accustomed to think that we must see that the nurses not only have medical, surgical and obstetrical experience as a matter of course, we are realizing keenly that they must also be given adequate experience with children. Public Health Associations are telling us that in addition to these major branches of medicine, our nurses must know something about skin conditions, eye and ear work, and social service. They must also have the theory and be able to teach.

Each year we try to reach nearer the ideal that we keep before us and to prepare our nurses better for the responsibilities that we know will be laid upon them. As an example of what may happen, I will mention that within the past year two of our young graduates who were recommended as assistant superintendents of small but active general hospitals, have been suddenly promoted to the superintendencies of their respective institutions.

During the past year we have not limited the number of student nurses to the actual hospital needs, but in anticipation of the new private ward, all candidates who have met our requirements have been accepted. Consequently, we now have a total enrollment of 267 nurses, which includes 30 graduates and 27 probationers.

Our new Emergency ward has drafted on the school for three student nurses and the ever-growing Out-Patient Department has had to have more help. There are

8 Nurses at McLean
8 Nurses at Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary
15 Nurses at Wesson Maternity Hospital
2 Nurses at Boston Lying-In Hospital
1 Nurse at Convalescent Hospital
1 Nurse in the Instructive District Nursing Association
2 Nurses assisting in research work
1 Nurse in the X-Ray Department
2 Senior Pupils assist Miss McCrae with the probationers

40

This makes a total of 40 who are not occupied with the direct care of patients in our own hospital.

The most striking fact disclosed by our statistics this year is that our larger school is not due to a very much larger number of probationers received. The number taken in each year has varied from 90 in 1911 to 106 in 1916. Yet the pupil nurses in the school numbered 151 in 1911 and number 236 now.

The number of probationers who dropped out in 1911 were 53 against 19 in 1916. The number of capped nurses who dropped out for various reasons in 1911 were 16 against 4 last year. The scale of those who have dropped out from year to year has decreased just in proportion as the number of nurses has increased. The reasons that underlie these figures should be of vital interest to all who are concerned in the nursing department of our hospital.

During these seven years we wonder what has been happening and why this school should be blessed with an ample number of good applicants and so many others complaining bitterly of a shortage.

We have demanded a high-school education as a minimum educational requirement. We have established a non-payment system and ask a tuition for the preliminary course and we have an increasing number of good applicants.

We have also shortened the hours of duty somewhat—we have established an excellent preliminary course of instruction besides the theoretical classes taught by Miss Dieter. Miss McCrae has supervised 2837 practical demonstrations by probationers during the year; we have improved the curriculum every year; have made new and attractive affiliations; and not least of all, our friends have made it possible for us to offer our nurses another attractive, comfortable home. Unfortunately, the 60 nurses who were living in rented houses outside the grounds, filled this new home to most of its capacity immediately, so that during the three years we have enjoyed it, the school has again outgrown its accommodations and we need another and need it badly. Two features of the prospective new home that are urgently required are a dining room and an infirmary. Of course every one realizes how desirable single rooms are for health and study. The scholarships which kind friends have given have made it possible for some desirable women to train here who would otherwise have had to go elsewhere. Miss Agnes West has started a loan fund with $100, called the Marion Moir West Students' Loan Fund, in memory of her sister, a graduate of the class of 1889. Mrs. Crane, class of 1915, added $80.00 to it. We hope it will grow, as many candidates would appreciate a loan who would not wish to accept other aid.

The fact that our school attracts plenty of candidates from all over the country, and even from Europe, is because we give them education, both practical and theoretical, that makes their time spent here worth while. It is because we take good care of our sick nurses—because they are happy while in training, and because their relatives and friends are at liberty to inspect any part of the living and working conditions existing in the hospital or nurses' residences. Yet we continue to look forward to many needed improvements.

At the present time a great transition is going on in the nursing world. With the degeneracy of nursing education brought about by conscious and unconscious exploitation of pupil nurses for economic purposes, by short term schools, and the correspondence schools, a reaction to these conditions has resulted in legislation that has produced state registration for nurses in 42 states (compulsory in a few, and ultimately inevitable in all states) in training school inspection and standardization of educational requirements and training school curricula.

This and the increasing demand upon the part of social reformers, sanitarians and medical scientists for nurses of a superior type professionally, has rapidly altered the map of nursing schools. Several universities have now adopted the training schools for nurses into the university scheme as definitely as they control the medical and law schools.

A central school for nurses is being established and endowed in Chicago, and Henry Ford is undertaking to establish a model hospital and school for nurses in Detroit. The alumnae of the Johns Hopkins Training School for Nurses is building up an endowment fund for its school.

Now may I quote again from that splendid first report of 1879 when there were only 48 nurses in the hospital and a very elementary curriculum. "..... It is sometimes supposed that the adoption of nurses from our school by the hospital precludes any further need of money for its use. This is not so; our monthly expenses ..... are continuous, and we earnestly hope that if our work is approved and our graduates do themselves credit we may come to be endowed with money sufficient to carry out our plans in the best way.

Two years ago I mentioned in my report the desirability of an endowment for our school (not realizing that the plea had been voiced in 1879) so that there could be no hindrance in an economic way to its effort in maintaining a first-class nursing service and an educational nursing center, from which we should continue to graduate fine types of women as well-trained nurses.

Thanks to the alumnae, who thought such a movement should rightly start with them, such an endowment has been initiated. Last August circulars and pledge cards were sent to all our graduates whom we could reach, asking such help as they could give. It was stated that if 700 persons could be found who would pledge $102 a year for seven years, we could accumulate $500,000, enough to start with by our fiftieth anniversary in 1923.

This may make the timid gasp and the incredulous scoff, but pray tell me how a school for nurses is in any way less worthy of adequate support than are our colleges, our schools of law, medicine, theology, technology, etc.? And if an independent school needs endowment, how much more one connected with a hospital, which depends upon the school for its nursing staff. If our school deteriorates at all it is a real misfortune to the hospital.

At present the only endowed department of nursing education in the country is that of "Nursing and Health" at Columbia University in New York. Lillian Wald, a nurse, inspired Mrs. Helen Hartley Jenkins to give that first and only endowment. Other philanthropists will surely rise up to help the nurses in their efforts to place their schools on a sure foundation.

Since August we have received, chiefly from graduates, $2960.50 with pledges of several thousands more. The sums sent in vary from $1.00 up to one gift of $500. Several have given $100 each, and with all the contributions have come delightful and encouraging words of interest in and affection for the school.

The donors represent the classes back in the early eighties up to the 1916 class.

One enthusiastic and devoted alumna (who has retired from active nursing) earned her contribution by working all her spare time for several months on articles for a Christmas sale.

Others in the midst of warring nations, giving their time, work and money to the wounded and destitute, cared enough for their Alma Mater to send their contributions also.

The married graduates, as well as the single ones, have testified their loyalty in this practical manner. Could there be anything better than this to report at our forty-second graduation?

Is there any question in anyone's mind as to whether the work of our nurses warrants us in our assurance that our friends who are interested in the hospital and our department will help us raise this endowment so that the future security of the school may never be questioned? One hundred and ninety-five graduates are doing private work in Massachusetts and, as it is difficult to find one unemployed (and as there is no dearth of nurses in the private field), it seems safe to assume that they are doing satisfactory work. Forty graduates are superintendents of hospitals or training schools in New England alone, and 90 more are doing various kinds of educational, public health and institutional work in New England.

Many more are scattered in groups throughout the country, many of them working at hard problems.

Not less than 40 graduates are war nursing in the different European countries.

The friends of the school have reason to be gratified that our nurses do not shrink from difficult positions—and if the general public realized just how difficult the problems are that have to be solved in many of the institutions in the country, it would be righteously shocked.

May I mention two or three situations? A large money-making hospital (in which one of our graduates found herself superintendent) put its pupil nurses to sleep in bunks similar to the cheaper class of staterooms on steamers. Twenty-four hour duty was common and instruction negligible. There was the greatest indifference to moral standards. In another, where a house in which 130 nurses slept and 160 persons were fed, the work was being done by three men and two women. A low morale existed, as should be expected under such circumstances. In another hospital pupil nurses were on 24-hour duty.

specialing private patients—sleeping on a cot in small rooms with their patients (even in cases where the patients had contagious diseases).

In many so-called nurses' schools, it has been found that the pressure of practical work on the wards has crowded out the theoretical work so that the seniors were within three or four months of graduating who had not had their lectures in anatomy, physiology, bacteriology or obstetrics.

It seems to me a worthy mission for the graduates of an institution as old and honorable as is the Massachusetts General Hospital to help solve these serious problems that involve everything that is vital to our existence—health and morality.

As to the present graduating class, there was never a better one. Their work has been earnest and intelligent; their instructors and head nurses in our affiliated institutions corroborate this. Their attitude has been loyal and co-operative. Some are planning to go to the foreign field, some to work with the Southern mountain whites, but the majority intend to do executive or educational work, and we know that, wherever they go, they will be a comfort to the people with whom they work. We can say this with assurance, because here they have not worked under compulsion and they have given us of their best always, not only taking conscientious and sympathetic care of the patients, but working for esprit de corps among the students as a body.

I will close my report with a last quotation from the trustees' report of 1879:

"We are confident that when the knowledge of our work and our wants has entered into the thoughts of the bountiful givers who mean that Boston shall not be backward in any good thing, we shall be helped in a work which necessarily makes no show, but whose results may at any time deal with the vital question of our own lives or of those dearer than our own."

The above report was given at the graduation of the 1917 class and has been printed by request.

There is much concerning the school and its alumnae that is both important and interesting that would be worth embodying in this Annual Report if space permitted.

We have lost by death during the year one pupil, Miss Ethel Fixter, and five of our alumni, Mary Batchelder Fuller (1907) soon after her marriage; Nellie Partridge (1898); Clara Stevens Glidden (1888); Mary Johnson Aitken (1892); and Lucia L. Belles (1903).

It is not enough that we sympathize with the friends and relatives of these who have completed their life work, but it should serve as a reminder that for our own work we are sure of no time but the present.

There have been many important changes in the Training School staff and we owe gratitude to several people who have given valuable services to the school; their very number precludes individual mention.

Our new cooking laboratory, which enables us to include dietetics in our preliminary course, is much appreciated.

The Ladies' Advisory Committee presented the school with a Cumulative Encyclopedia for a Christmas present.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer gave "The History of Nursing" by Nutting and Dock to Ruth King (1917) for the best senior essay, and "The Life of Florence Nightingale" by Sir E. T. Cook to Lucile Kalb (1917) who won the second prize.

We are indebted to Mr. M. H. R. Dalton for a victrola and some fine records which he presented to the Thayer.

A beautiful Winged Victory adds to the attractiveness of our reception room, due to the kindness of Mrs. Frank Hoyt, mother of one of our nurses.

The 1917 class have given a handsome oak library table to the new home.

The names of individual donors to the Training School endowment fund have been published in the Quarterly Record. A very gratifying contribution of $200 came from a lady in memory of the first two graduates of the school who were employed in her home early in 1876. They are both dead, but this lady, who wishes her name withheld, gave $100 in memory of both Margaret Russell and Mary Kelly Johanneson (class of 1875).

All who are interested in raising this endowment of $500,000 by 1923 are urged to give "until it hurts" (to quote a Wellesley graduate who was contributing to the Wellesley dormitory fund after their recent fire) and to interest as many philanthropic friends as possible. If raised in small sums the givers must be legion, and time is passing.

All our graduates are not yet members of the Alumnae Association but every year brings in a few of the older graduates, as well as the new recruits. Remember that "in union there is strength."
